outside the Earth are actually fallen angels, being commonly used to refer to anunnaki, aliens, mythicals and gods.

Fallenangelism is considered to be a chauvinistic version of Abrahamism, leading to human chauvinism, in addition to being considered as xenophobia and racism.

One of the main theses against fallenangelism is the thesis that all humans and non-humans are equal and unique beings, with their differences in DNA, mentality, spirituality, culture, sensitivity, psychicity and powers. Soon making non-human beings like humans. This being the main criticism of the fallenangelism thesis.

Another criticism of the thesis of fallenangelism is the thesis that there are other religions and forms of spirituality outside this planet, as already existent non-Abrahamic religions. Therefore, showing that the fallenangelism thesis can be relativized. For while there are humans who think nonhumans are fallen angels, there are nonhumans who think humans are primitive, dogmatic and religious fanatics, like humans who believe in fallenangelism.

One criticism, already within Abrahamism, is that we cannot consider all forms of non-human life as fallen angels, because, since they would be like humans, they would also have free will and be able to choose what they want. Therefore, they are equally beings before God (the Eternal One), being all connected to the same and being different manifestations of God and having their own interpretations about God.

Therefore, we can conclude that anunnaki, aliens, myths and gods are not fallen angels, just as any kind of non-human life or of life outside the Earth are not fallen angels, and still are far away from being fallen angels, in fact, they are beings like that. as humans are, with their differences from humans and their own understandings and worldviews.
